

Farm Succession School in Rhode Island

Are you looking toward your farm transition?

Warwick, RI:

at USDA Service Center

60 Quaker Lane #46, Warwick, RI

10:00 a.m. – 3:30 p.m.

December 11, 2018

January 9, 2019 and

February 8, 2019

Your commitment of three winter days will allow you to develop a concrete succession plan for your farm business, your land and your future.

The fee is $300 per farmer or farm couple, including lunch, refreshments and materials. You'll get $200 back toward additional succession-related advising. You will also receive no-cost technical assistance between sessions and continuing planning support from Land For Good.

Instructors:

Jon Jaffe, Farm Business Consultant, Farm Credit East

Kathy Ruhf, Senior Advisor, Land For Good

An attorney with expertise in succession planning

One of your biggest challenges is planning for farm succession. Attend this year's Farm Succession School! You'll get structured and sustained support to make decisions, engage your family, and organize the legal and financial mechanics.

Topics include:

- Goal setting
- Estate planning
- Retirement planning and budgeting
- Family communications
- Legal structures and considerations
- Bringing on a successor
- Management transfer and mentoring

Farmers who have participated in past Succession Schools loved the amount of attention they received, and valued the trust and sharing that developed among the participants, regardless of scale or type of enterprise.

"It is a big relief to me! Thanks for the push to get it done! The course was well worthwhile."

"A must do! Definitely would recommend it. Well worth the time!"

Open to all New England farmers! Space is limited.

Registration deadline extended to December 5th.

To register, call (603)357-1600 or go online to
